

For long time Tualatin resident Amanda Neun, education is not just a passion – it’s a career. Tossing out a one-size-fits all approach to learning and the hassles of an after-school commute, Amanda and her co-owner Glenn Thorstensen are bringing in-home, customized tutoring services to the Wilsonville, Tualatin, Sherwood, West Linn area through the innovative and exciting company Tutor Doctor.

What makes Tutor Doctor stand out among options for parents and students? Unlike brick-and-mortar tutoring companies with set hours and travel requirements, Tutor Doctor reaches students in their own homes and on their schedules. Tutor Doctor believes that “the thinking cap can be tailored,” so understanding students’ individual learning styles, academic needs, weaknesses, and goals is paramount to creating a personalized curriculum and a perfect match between student and tutor. “I know we all have different dominating learning styles, and I’m passionate about the Tutor Doctor model because it is authentic to each student,” says Amanda. While better grades are a measurable goal, homework isn’t the only focus when it comes to student success. “It’s not just about achieving academic potential but building self-esteem and confidence,” Amanda tells me, explaining that Tutor Doctor’s unique Academic Success Formula focuses on both students’ school subjects and on providing tools to overcome barriers and achieve excellence in life.
